Your beneficiary(ies) will receive the value of the accumulation under your annuity(ies) as a death benefit if you die before you begin to receive retirement income. A beneficiary may be an individual, an institution, a trustee, or your estate; but a beneficiary should always be designated.

You can guard against complications and ensure faster payment of benefits by keeping your designation as simple as possible. The Primary Beneficiary (Class I) receives the benefits to be paid when you die. If no Primary Beneficiary (Class I) is living, the benefits go to the Contingent Beneficiary (Class II). If a Class includes more than one person, the benefits are divided equally among the living beneficiaries of the Class, unless you specify otherwise. If none of the beneficiaries are living, the benefits go to your estate.

If all or part of your accumulation is attributable to contributions made under a retirement plan or tax-deferred annuity plan covered by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) of 1974, and if you are married at your death, then your designation of beneficiary may be subject to your spouse's rights to receive a preretirement survivor death benefit, as explained below. Although you may currently be exempt, please be aware that if you move to another institution through which premiums are remitted, future benefits could be affected.

Notice of Spouse's Right to Annuity Death Benefits

Federal pension law (ERISA) provides that at least 50% of annuity death benefits covered by the law must be paid to the surviving spouse of a deceased retirement or tax-deferred annuity plan participant regardless of the designation of beneficiary in effect at the time of death, unless the surviving spouse has consented to the designation of beneficiary. TIAA-CREF annuity benefits covered by the law are annuity benefits under a retirement or tax-deferred annuity plan subject to ERISA, which covers private retirement plans. Retirement or tax-deferred annuity plans at publicly supported institutions (state colleges or universities) or certain churches, are generally not covered. However, some state plans and other government plans have similar provisions.

If you name a person other than your spouse as primary beneficiary for more than 50% of your benefits, and your spouse's right to receive a preretirement annuity death benefit has not been waived, here is how the law may affect your annuity death benefits that are payable before retirement income begins.

If you are married at your death, then 50% of your covered annuity death benefits will be payable to the person to whom you are married at the time of your death and the remainder will be payable to the person(s) you have named in your beneficiary designation.

If you are not married at your death, then the law does not affect your annuity benefits. Your annuity benefits will be payable to the person(s) you have named in your beneficiary designation.

Waiver of Spouse's Preretirement Survivor Death Benefit

If you are married and you want more than 50% of your benefits to go to someone besides your spouse, your spouse's rights can be waived by completing the Spouse's Waiver section on this form. To waive spousal rights, you must be at least 35 years old, or you must have terminated from the employer funding the retirement or tax-deferred annuity plan. A waiver isn't official until your spouse's signature has been acknowledged by a notary public or verified by your plan representative.

7C. SPOUSE'S WAIVER

If you named your spouse as a primary beneficiary for at least 50% of the survivor benefits for the contract(s) listed on this form, or you completed Section 7A or 7B, skip this section. Otherwise, your spouse must read and sign this section. The spouse's signature must be witnessed by either your employer's Plan Representative or a Notary Public and the date of the signature must be the same as or later than the date of your signature.

Under federal law, you may have the right to receive a survivor benefit of at least 50% of the amount(s) in the contract(s) listed on this application that is(are) subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), if your spouse dies before you. As a result, you must provide your written consent in order for your spouse to name someone other than you - for more than 50% of the amount in the contract(s) - as a primary beneficiary. If you consent to the waiver and your spouse should predecease you, you will not be entitled to the qualified preretirement survivor death benefit under ERISA. This waiver authorizes any benefits payable by reason of death of your spouse prior to the time annuity income payments begin, to be paid to the beneficiary(ies) listed on this form in accordance with the provisions of the annuity contract(s) and/or certificate(s) indicated on this Beneficiary Designation form.

I understand and agree that I am giving up my right to receive preretirement survivor death benefits covered under ERISA from the TIAA-CREF contract(s) listed on this form. I release TIAA and CREF from all liability for making payment based on this authorization.
